ProAct Safety to Host Public Certification Workshop for Behavioral Safety in the Workplace

Internationally-recognized safety excellence expert, Terry L. Mathis, to guide attendees in the latest Behavior-Based Safety methods.

(The Woodlands, TX – January 27, 2016) ProAct Safety, Inc., a global leader of safety excellence strategies, is hosting a public workshop to certify participants in the Lean Behavior-Based Safety (Lean BBS®) process. The event, taking place February 2-4 in The Woodlands, TX, will be led by Terry L. Mathis, founder and CEO of ProAct Safety. Attendees who complete the workshop will be certified for three years in ProAct Safety's best-in-industry BBS methods.

Having implemented hundreds of customized BBS processes since the early 1980's, Mathis began integrating Lean manufacturing methodologies into BBS strategies in the early 2000s. In doing so, he quickly realized substantial and more sustainable gains. Mathis and ProAct Safety president and COO, Shawn M. Galloway, are two of the first to bring advanced behavioral safety thinking beyond North America, where the two esteemed safety experts are known for providing a unique set of tools and methods to help companies transformationally improve safety practices and culture.

"BBS methodologies are proven to be effective, but the real challenge is fitting the approach to each company's unique organizational culture. It's important that safety not only be implemented efficiently, but also effectively," said Galloway. "This workshop outlines clear steps to help clients match our successful methods to their unique processes, cultures and operational realities."
