ProAct Safety Announces New Format to Two Advanced Webinar Series

The semi-monthly safety webinars will now offer on-demand viewing to all registrants and are designed to bring timely and universally-applicable methods of improving safety culture and behavioral performance for all personnel in any industry.

(The Woodlands, TX – February 8, 2016) ProAct Safety, the leader of safety excellence strategies, announced an increase in value and improvement to the format of their two webinar series, designed to bring comprehensive and timely education to safety professionals and continuous improvement teams in any location. The series are titled on their specific focuses: Safety Excellence and Behavior-Based Safety. Both series now offer 14 days of on-demand viewing for those who can't attend the individual live events.

Each series also offers an annual subscription, with which the subscriber receives instant access to all previous webinars in the series, available on-demand for the length of the subscription. A dual subscription is also available, offering monthly events at a significant discount. Topics range from safety culture creation and safety strategies to leadership, sustainable excellence and safety measurement. The webinars are presented by ProAct Safety principals, Shawn Galloway and Terry Mathis.

"It's not feasible for most companies to send every person on staff, or even continuous improvement teams, to off-site safety seminars, which is the traditional way of gaining safety education," said Shawn M. Galloway, ProAct Safety president. "And it's difficult for personnel to bring back every bit of learning to colleagues. These webinars are one proven way to solve those problems. They deliver universal truths about safety and practical, implementable recommendations to all staff members at the same time, so a company can successfully and more effectively get everyone on the same page and make substantial safety improvements."
