ProAct Safety Facilitates Safety Improvement With Two New Advanced Webinar Series

The semi-monthly safety webinars are designed to bring timely and universally-applicable methods of improving safety culture and behavioral performance for all personnel in any industry.

(The Woodlands, TX – March 10, 2015) ProAct Safety, the leader of safety excellence strategies, announced the upcoming launch of two new webinar series designed to bring comprehensive and timely education to safety professionals and continuous improvement teams in any location. The series are titled on their specific focuses: Safety Excellence and Behavior-Based Safety. The first session of the Behavior-Based Safety series will take place on March 24 and the first session of the Safety Excellence series will take place on April 21, 2015.

“It’s not feasible for most companies to send every person on staff, or even continuous improvement teams, to off-site safety seminars, which is the traditional way of gaining safety education,” said Shawn M. Galloway, ProAct Safety president. “And it’s difficult for personnel to bring back every bit of learning to colleagues. These webinars are one proven way to solve those problems. They deliver universal truths about safety to all staff members at the same time, so a company can successfully get everyone on the same page and make substantial safety improvements.”

The live webinar cost is $99 for any single event, or $475 for a 1-year subscription (6 scheduled sessions). Each session will consist of a 45-minute presentation and 15-minute Ask the Expert. All webinars will take place from 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. (Central US Time) on pre-announced dates. Topics range from safety culture creation and safety strategies to leadership, sustainable excellence and safety measurement. The webinars will be presented by ProAct Safety principals, Shawn Galloway and Terry Mathis.
