Galloway Appointed CEO as ProAct Safety Founder Retires

Safety excellence consulting firm names new CEO

(Houston, TX – July 1, 2021) ProAct Safety announced, effective immediately following the retirement of founder and CEO Terry Mathis, Shawn M. Galloway has taken the position of CEO.

After service in the US Army, a career in engineering and process safety consulting, Galloway joined ProAct Safety in 2005, overseeing the firm's consulting efforts. In 2009, he became President and Chief Operating Officer, leading all global operations and client engagements for the firm. During this time, through a concentration on the four components of safety – strategy, culture, leadership, and employee involvement and engagement – ProAct Safety has become the most successful consultancy dedicated to helping organizations achieve and sustain safety excellence.

Galloway offered, "ProAct Safety has a 28-year legacy of success through collaboration with our clients to find solutions to improve their safety performance and culture. I am honored to have contributed to the past 16 years in my previous role, and I look forward to the opportunity to continue to serve as a trusted advisor to our current and future clients."
